Student Loan Default Rates:

Students who entered repayment in 2018-2019 academic year, based on FY17. The table and graph below shows an increase in the percentage of education majors in default. One reason is due in part to the increase in the number of education majors. Traditionally, the EPP had very low student loan default rates that were considerably lower than the state and national averages. The Indiana Department of Education provides the cohort default rate annually based on 3 years' worth of default history and a year's worth of repayment.

| Year | EPP Education Majors* | University Average | State Average | National Average |
|------|-----------------------|----------------------|-----------------|--------------------|
| 2017 | 7.6% | 5.8% | 9.6% | 9.7% |
| 2016 | 0.0% | 4.9% | 10.5% | 10.1% |
| 2015 | 2.2% | 5.1% | 14.2% | 10.8% |
